

instrument can help keep the brain and information-processing in top form and may even reshape brain circuitry. He said curiosity was the engine of intellectual achievement that drove to keep learning, keep trying, keep pushing forward.

He said teachers had a lot to do with their students' motivational level and said a student may arrive in class with a certain degree of motivation but the teacher's behaviour and teaching style, the structure of the course, the nature of the assignments and informal interactions with students all had a large effect on student motivation.

Ghosh said educational psychology had identified two basic classifications of motivation - intrinsic and extrinsic. He said intrinsic motivation rose from a desire to learn a topic due to its inherent interests, for self-fulfillment, enjoyment and to achieve a mastery of the subject. He said on the other hand, extrinsic motivation was motivation to perform and succeed for the sake of accomplishing a specific result or outcome. He said students who were very grade-oriented were extrinsically motivated, whereas students who seem were neither too easy nor too difficult. He advised teachers to help students find personal meaning and value in the material and create an atmosphere that was open and positive. He said in order to foster intrinsic motivation, try to create learning activities that were based on topics that were relevant
